Known Problems:

1. Because we query the stats.nba.com page to get a player's image, a problem arises when the page does not have an up to date image of the player. The problem is minor, and is something that we account for. If a player does not have a picture, we have a placeholder image to take the place of where the player's image would be. The page still loads the player's page and stats.
2. Because we query the stats.nba.com page to get the player's team logo, a problem arises when the player ended their career without being signed to a team. The error that occurs is that in the player info box at the top of the page, there is significant empty space where the team logo and team name should be. The page still loads the player's page and stats.
3. Also a very rare error that occurs for some players is if the requested player was on one of the teams that was discontinued, that team's logo and team name is not uploaded to the page. The page still loads the player's stats.
4. There is a stipulation that when entering a player's name into the search bar, the first or last name must be correct in order for the results page to have any results for similar players. If there is no direct match with the first or last name, there will be no results for redirection to a player's page.
